North Street Quarter - Your Say is good

The North Street Quarter, by the river, close to the heart of Lewes, is the most important development area in the town. We're Santon, the owners of the site, and we want to show you our work, talk about our plans, and hear what you have to say.

We are holding a series of three public workshops on the future of the site, in the light of the Council and National Park Authority's draft Core Strategy for the town.

Independent facilitators the Democratic Society will support the public conversation in the town.

At the first workshop you can:

- learn about the site constraints and its rich heritage;
- take a view on how new development can embrace existing character and achieve modern living and working standards;
- tell us what you think about affordable homes;
- let us know how you value tourism and the benefits it brings to Lewes;
- describe what you think is needed to boost the economy.

Later in the year, two further workshops will discuss design options and initial plans. If you can't make the meeting, you can see all the information we're presenting, and answer some questions, on our website from 19 Jan.
